LaRouche: Mankind must confront extinction threat

The spate of deadly earthquakes around the Pacific Rim of Fire, including last week's Myanmar (Burma) triple earthquake, is a harbinger of what the world faces in the immediate period ahead, which must be recognised as an extinction threat that the nations of the world must mobilise their scientists, engineers and economies to confront.

U.S. statesman and physical economist Lyndon LaRouche is leading the world to address this reality, by marshalling a "crash-program" scientific investigation that will increase mankind's understanding of the cyclical solar and galactic forces that drive these periods of extinction danger.

What is already known, is that there is a correlation between solar flares, which bombard earth with enormous bursts of energy many orders of magnitude greater than any force on earth, and tectonic activity. The earth is in a heightened danger period in the sunspot (solar flare) cycle, having emerged from an extended period of no sunspots into a period of rapidly increasing sunspots as the cycle builds to its maximum in 2013. British astrophysicist Piers Corbyn attributes the Japan earthquake to the X-class solar flare of 10th March, 2011, that significantly impacted the earth, and was reported by NASA.

On a far greater time scale, the geological record displays a correlation between a 62 million year cycle of tectonic/volcanic activity, and a 62 million year extinction cycle, both of which correlate to the 62 million year cycle of our solar system's oscillation, or "bob", above and below the plane of the Milky Way galaxy, indicating that galactic forces drive the major catastrophic events recorded in earth's geological record. The last great extinction, that of the dinosaurs, was 65 million years ago.

LaRouche warns that few places on earth are as well-prepared for earthquakes and tsunamis as Japan. So in the likely event that earthquakes of unprecedented magnitude triggered by solar and galactic forces hit other populated areas typified by California, which sits aside the ominous San Andreas Fault and is clearly also on the dangerous Rim of Fire and is overdue for a major quake but has made virtually no preparation, mankind will experience an unprecedented threat to its survival.

LaRouche said on 23rd March, "Here we have this wonderful universe, this wonderful galaxy, with all the dangers involved in it, but we have the human potential for understanding it. And by using that potential, we have a fighting chance that the human species will continue to exist. If we don't, I don't think the human species can continue to exist, and we're now at a point where the very awesome forces, the galactic forces which are behind what happened, with this little minuscule taste of what's coming, in the Pacific, that with that hitting us, and we are not equipped by any means, to cope with those forces! We can adjust to them—but cope with them? No! And we have to change the tune, from that of adjusting to something we can no longer live with, as a species, and trying to get to the point, where we exert control over this process, which is our proper destiny."

LaRouche emphasised that the biggest threat to mankind's survival is the British Crown's Green Fascism which has halted all scientific and technological development for the past several decades, including the development of the power sources (fission and fusion power, matter-antimatter reactions, etc.) necessary to enable us to deal with these threats.

City of London tightens grip on Australia's central bank

The Gillard government's new appointments to the Reserve Bank board are both extremely well-credentialed assets of the City of London.

To replace former NFF president Donald McGauchie and academic economist Warwick McKibbin, Treasurer Wayne Swan has turned to Dr John Edwards, a former economics adviser to Paul Keating, and, more significantly, the former chief economist of one of Britain's most powerful banks, HSBC (Hongkong Shanghai Banking Corporation—the British Empire's drug dealing bank from the days of the Opium Wars against China).

His other choice is Catherine Tanna, the managing director of BG Group (British Gas, the natural gas company taking over Queensland). Tanna has had a long career in the Anglo-Dutch raw materials cartel, with Royal Dutch Shell in Asia, Africa and the U.K., and before that BHP Petroleum.

The Reserve Bank of Australia is government-owned, but privately-controlled, under the guise of "independence", by a board dominated by representatives of large corporations. Three of the nine directors are bureaucrats: Governor Glenn Stevens, Deputy Governor Rick Battelino, and new Treasury Secretary Martin Parkinson, who doesn't so much represent the government as the permanent bureaucracy of the Department of Treasury.

The six other members are all big shots in Australia's City of London-controlled big business establishment: John Akehurst, Origin Energy and CSL; Roger Corbett, former Woolworths CEO, Fairfax media, and Wal-Mart; Jillian Broadbent, ASX and Woolworths; Graham Kraehe, Bluescope Steel and Brambles; and now Catherine Tanna and John Edwards.

By these appointments, Swan and Gillard are betraying Australia's national interest to the City of London, and spitting on the graves of "old" Labor's John Curtin and Ben Chifley, who fought tirelessly to keep the central bank under government control. As John Curtin declared in his Sep. 20, 1937 campaign launch speech at the Fremantle Town Hall, unless the government controlled the central bank as a national bank, it didn't have any economic sovereignty: "If the Government of the Commonwealth deliberately excluded itself from all participation in the making or changing of monetary policy it cannot govern except in a secondary degree."

Japanese wake-up call: It's time for mankind to take charge of earthquakes!

A brand new LPACTV video, The Rim of Fire, opens up a scientific investigation into the role of solar and galactic forces in earthquake activity, as in the recent devastating earthquakes in New Zealand and Japan, so that by understanding their causes, mankind can move to increasingly take charge of these otherwise deadly natural events.

The British monarchy's toadies in the mass media and in Prince Philip's Green (bowel) movement are preying on the infantile fears of baby boomers shaped by Hollywood tripe such as On The Beach, to whip up hysteria against nuclear power, to try to ban it forever. In reality, not only have the Japanese nuclear plants performed extremely well under this devastating natural catastrophe, but mankind must vastly expand the power at his disposal, both to meet the basic needs of the world's population, one billion of whom are already starving, but also to develop the capability to master such catastrophes—which unleash power tens of thousands of times that of the largest H-bomb ever exploded. Therefore, contrary to the genocidal maniac Prince Philip, we must drastically increase the number of nuclear fission plants, and then move onto fusion and matter-antimatter relationships.

If you don't want to swallow the Royal lie that "nuclear power will kill you" (and therefore submit the human species to certain doom), but are instead keen for mankind to expand the boundaries of scientific knowledge to increase further humanity's power over nature, then watch the The Rim of Fire.

You will learn about:

- The correlation between solar flares and earthquakes, including the recent massive flare just before the Christchurch earthquake;
- The enormous electromagnetic power of solar flares, power which is many, many orders of magnitude greater than the biggest ever nuclear device built on earth;
- The nature of the earthquake zone around the Pacific Rim, the Rim of Fire, and past evidence of electromagnetic activity from the sun involved in great earthquakes.

The Japanese Earthquake must serve as a wake-up call for mankind. Mainly due to the British Crown's creation of the Green movement over the past decades, we are behind where we should be in our scientific understanding of the universe, specifically the relationship between our Earth, our active Sun, and our galaxy. In The Rim of Fire, Lyndon LaRouche introduces a discussion between LPAC researchers Peter Martinson and Natalie Lovegren on the coincidence between the recent solar flares and the associated tectonic activity, and the implications for our near future. The Greenies may bow down to their goddess Gaia, but anyone with even an ounce of brains knows that Mother Nature can be a real bitch, and must be tamed.
