Brits reveal global green fascist “master plan”

A German front for the British Crown’s genocidal green agenda has released a “Master Plan” for a zero-carbon economy, which German political leader Helga Zepp-LaRouche has denounced as a “blunt proposal for global eco-fascism, a green world dictatorship in the tradition of Thomas Hobbes, H.G. Wells, and [Nazi jurist] Carl Schmitt.”

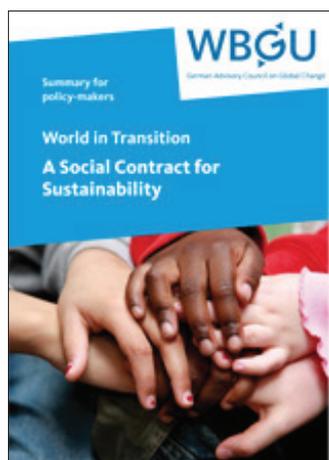

Australians especially should find the content of this master plan unnerving, because of its striking similarity to the carnage that green fascism has already caused among Australia’s industries and infrastructure, the remnants of which face annihilation from yet more policies similar to the “master plan”—the Murray-Darling Basin Authority Plan and Julia Gillard’s carbon tax. The only difference is that this plan just comes right out and boldly demands what is intended, but only implicit in the MDBA/carbon tax savagery and similar green diktats—the elimination of modern agro-industrial economy altogether.

The document, from the German Federal Government’s Advisory Council on Global Change (WBGU), is entitled World in Transition—A Social Contract for a Great Transformation. Helga Zepp-LaRouche’s husband, the U.S. statesman Lyndon LaRouche, blasted the plan on 5th May: “What Hitler did, was minor compared to what is being proposed ... If this thing is introduced in Europe successfully, you can say civilisation is about to be ended. My mission is to stop that!”

The document and its executive summary [this can be downloaded from <http://www.wbgu.de/en/publications/flagship-reports/flagship-report-2011/>], World in Transition—A Social Contract for Sustainability, are as Lyndon LaRouche emphasised, “a product of British intelligence, designed to establish a fascist, zero-growth dictatorship over Europe.” The WBGU’s chairman, Prof. Dr. Hans Joachim Schellnhuber, is a favourite of the Queen of England: she inducted him as a Commander of the Order of the British Empire in 2004; she personally dispatched him to the United States that same year to accompany Tony Blair’s top science adviser Sir David King to try to convince then President George W. Bush that climate change was a greater threat than global terrorism, a mission which Britain’s 31st October, 2004 Observer newspaper called a “rare intervention in world politics”; and he was installed as the long-time head of the Tyndall Centre at Britain’s East Anglia University, the fabricators of the climate change hoax, for which the Queen has personally led the charge, as in her demands to the November 2009 Trinidad and Tobago Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in the lead-up to the failed Copenhagen Summit.

for Policy-Makers” demands:

- An end to nuclear power and fossil fuels in the transition to a zero-carbon economy—the WBGU equates ending their use to the moral challenge of stopping slavery and child labour;
- The elimination of national sovereignty: “the transformation can only succeed if nation states put global cooperation mechanisms before their own short-term oriented interests ... By the middle of the century, the global energy systems must largely be decarbonised.”
- The imposition of a zero-carbon régime on poor nations, as well: “Even the poorer developing countries must veer towards a low-emission development path in the medium-term.”

To accomplish this fascist transformation, the WBGU proposes a “new social contract”, one which eliminates the nation state: “the nation state can no longer be considered the sole basis for the contractual relationship.”

To enforce this global fascism, it proposes to replace the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) with the International Renewable Energy Agency (IRENA), which would then “[s]tep by step ... be developed further into an International Sustainable Energy Agency”. The WBGU also demands that “the World Bank should develop a measurable, sophisticated strategy for low-carbon transformation”. As for the UN, the WBGU demands “a review of the UN Charter” and “a completely restructured United Nations organisation” including the establishment of a Council for Sustainable Development, “on par with the UN Security Council”. It further demands the establishment of a World Commission for Low-Carbon Urban Development and a Global Commission for Sustainable Land Use. The WBGU admits: “Politically, this requires a historically unprecedented transcending of established sovereignty concepts”.

On agriculture, it shamelessly bangs the drum for the British imperial policy of free trade (whose chief beneficiaries are the commodity speculators in the City of London): “The WBGU again emphasises not least the major significance of a rapid and more extensive liberalisation of global agricultural trade under the World Trade Organisation (WTO). The agricultural subsidies in the EU and the other OECD countries should soon be reduced further, and market access for developing countries should be improved.” Likewise, it insists upon a carbon emissions trading scheme, to further empower City of London bankers to siphon money off the public to prop themselves up, saying, “the WBGU considers cap and trade to be the more effective instrument”, than taxation. [Gillard’s carbon tax is a transition to cap and trade—Ed.]

And in conclusion, following all its talk about democracy and individual initiative, the WBGU report states dictatorially: “The ‘fossil-nuclear metabolism’ of the industrialised society has no future ... So nothing less than a new social contract must be agreed to.”

Citizens Electoral Council leader Craig Isherwood declared today, “The intention to commit genocide and smash national sovereignty spelt out in this WBGU master plan is exactly the sort of thing which Australia has already suffered under two decades of green fascism, though not yet to this proposed degree. The usefulness of this document is that it reveals the actual intent of ‘environmentalism’—global dictatorial rule by the British Empire under a ‘green’ cover. Well, the CEC has a master plan too: we plan to beat this agenda—save our food bowl, stop the carbon tax, revive our industries, adopt nuclear power, and win back Australia’s sovereignty.”

He concluded, “If they want to survive, all Aussies must join our fight!”
