Isherwood: ACF a noxious pest

The Australian Conservation Foundation (ACF) is a virulently anti-human body, introduced into Australia from Great Britain by Prince Philip, and should be classified a “noxious pest” for its destruction of Australia’s productive base, Citizens Electoral Council leader Craig Isherwood declared this week.

Mr Isherwood blasted the ACF following its call for Australia’s human population to be classified as a “key threatening process” to biodiversity under the Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act.

“Human beings are a natural threat to only one thing,” Mr Isherwood said, “The power of the British oligarchs like Prince Philip.

“The British system, to this day, is the system of oligarchy, in which the born-to-rule elite hold real power, and see the masses of people as the ‘human herd’ to be managed, and culled.

“The ACF is an example of how they created the green movement to do it.”

The CEC National Secretary said the history of the Australian Conservation Foundation proved the oligarchical pedigree of the green movement.

In the same era he was still a renowned Indian tiger hunter, Prince Philip established the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) in 1961 with fellow oligarch, and unreconstructed Nazi, Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, and British Eugenics Society President Sir Julian Huxley.

The WWF was their population-reduction charity: in a globalised continuation of the British aristocratic tradition of monopolising game hunting on their vast English estates, and brutally prosecuting as “poachers” any hungry soul who’d do so little as snare a rabbit to feed their family, the WWF raised enormous sums of money from the expanded European aristocracy and their corporations like Shell, Rio Tinto, Unilever and ICI, to designate vast lands in still-colonial Africa as game parks, to be “protected” from the human population.

Inconveniently for the modern, image-conscious greenie, the pompous Prince Philip tended to blurt out his agenda, accustomed as he was to easy agreement from his fellow aristocrats; he once said, “You cannot keep a bigger flock of sheep than you are capable of feeding. In other words conservation may involve culling in order to keep a balance between the relative numbers in each species within any particular habitat. I realise this a very touchy subject, but the fact remains that mankind is part of the living world. ... Every new acre brought into cultivation means another acre denied to wild species.” [emphasis added]

In 1963, while on a Royal tour of Australia, Prince Philip called for the creation of an Australian WWF, which was formed as the Australian Conservation Foundation in 1964 under the presidency of Sir Garfield Barwick (the man who in 1949 spearheaded the private banks’ legal assault on Ben Chifley’s plan to assert national control over Australia’s banking system, and later gave Sir John Kerr the advice to sack the Whitlam government in 1975, for the threat it posed to the British oligarchy’s control of Australia’s resources by its proposal to “buy back the farm”).

The Prince himself was President of the ACF from 1971 to 1976, followed by H.C. “Nugget” Coombs, who once said, “The whole [human] species had become itself a disease. ...the human species was like a cancerous growth reproducing itself beyond control...”

“The ACF seeks to destroy Australia’s productive industries, and stop infrastructure development, because it is those things that support our human population,” Mr Isherwood pointed out.

“For example, it’s the ACF that has led the charge to shut down the Murray-Darling Basin, because it is our nation’s food-bowl.”

He warned, “If they can convince Environment Minister Peter Garrett—a former president of the ACF!—to legally classify people as a biodiversity threat, they will be on their way to turning all of Australia into one of Prince Philip’s game parks.

“It’s time we recognise the ACF for what it is, a royally-introduced noxious pest, and kick its genocidal agenda out of Australia,” he concluded.

British plot Obama assassination to hijack mass strike;

Australian revolt terrifies British mouthpiece Murdoch

American statesman Lyndon LaRouche has exposed the British hand behind the assassination threats leveled at President Barack Obama in the wake of his strong-arming his Nazi health care bill through the U.S. Congress last week.

LaRouche's warning coincided with a signal piece in British mouthpiece Rupert Murdoch's largest Australian daily, the Herald Sun, by Laurie Oakes, shrieking about "worrying signs" that the "US disease"—the mass strike popular revolt among the majority of Americans—is coming to Australia.

For more than nine months, the American people have been in revolt against Obama, for betraying their trust by bailing out Wall Street and the City of London, and then ramming through actually Nazi health care, that gouges $2 trillion out of Medicare for the elderly and forces 32 million Americans to sign up to private health insurance.

Rank-and-file members of Obama's own Democratic Party proved the depth of the hatred for Obama by electing LaRouche Democrat Keshia Rogers, who campaigned to impeach the president, in the 2nd March Texas Democratic Party 22nd Congressional district primary.

However, following last week's forced passage of the health care bill, the wave of justified outrage against Obama was hijacked by violent threats, one source of which, "former Alabama militia member" Mike Vanderboegh—a self-described hater of Abraham Lincoln, whom he accuses of having caused the death of hundreds of thousands of Americans by waging the Civil War—LaRouche identified as an assassination threat and further, he said, "his appeal to the British-created Confederacy is a clear marker that we are dealing with a British operation.

"There is a very real threat to the President," LaRouche continued. "He has, in effect, set himself up, by ramming through this Nazi health bill, and making himself the most undesirable official in the country. He has now become a liability for the British who run him, and they will use racism and every other tool at their command to personally target him. It has been clear from the moment the British chose Obama, that they have toyed with the option of making him a martyr, as a means of ripping apart and destroying the United States. Now that option is surfacing again.

"The problem is that the President is so nuts, that he is capable of walking into a British trap. It's the perfect set-up, from the British standpoint.

"Let's be clear. This President deserves his moustache for his Hitler health bill, and he urgently deserves to be impeached, so that we can move ahead as a nation, to solve the economic disaster which British globalisation has brought us, with FDR, American-system measures. But foreign operations, like the one with which Vanderboegh and his ilk are associated, must be exposed, and stopped", LaRouche concluded.

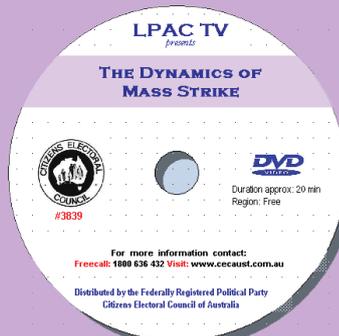

Citizens Electoral Council leader Craig Isherwood commented today that the Murdoch piece by Laurie Oakes showed how terrified the City of London was that the American mass strike was spreading, including to Australia.

"Murdoch is a mouthpiece for the City of London, which is terrified that the growing mass strike of people in the U.S. and other countries will force national governments to put the welfare of the people first, and strip the private financiers of their power," he explained.

"That's what the CEC is fighting for in Australia," he insisted. "Media 'enforcers' like Murdoch and Oakes have been deployed to squash it, because they know how close we are to winning."
